Abstract. Pastoralist societies in East Africa (Kenya, Tanzania, Uganda) face more demands on their way of life than at any previous time. Population growth, loss of herding lands to farmers, ranchers, game parks, and urban growth, increased commoditization of the livestock economy, out-migration by poor pastoralists, and dislocations brought about by drought, famine, and civil war are increasing throughout the region.

Pastoralism is a livelihood pursued by more than 20 million Africans across about 50 percent of the continent’s total area. In drier parts of the continent pastoralists concentrate mainly on camels and goats, but, in higher rainfall lands, they focus on cattle, sheep, and goats. The first archaeological evidence of livestock domestication on the continent can be traced to between 10,000 BCEand 9000 BCE, although there is some debate in the literature about the exact dates and causes for ...
