Police often break cyber crime down into two categories: Cyber enabled crime – traditional crimes committed using the internet. e.g. theft, harassment, fraud, identity theft, selling stolen goods, drug dealing or people smuggling. Cyber dependent crime - online crimes where a digital system is the target. These include attacks on computer systems to disrupt IT infrastructures, e.g. unauthorised access (hacking), malicious software programming (malware) or denial of service.

Crime has become very sophisticated as some criminals make use of the very latest technology. To handle this, the police have developed equally sophisticated methods of crime detection and prevention. Legislation has also been updated to allow the police to gather evidence on criminal activity carried out via the internet, for example. Information is the key word in crime detection and this information must be accurate and easily available.
